THE NEW HAYTIEN MINISTER.

Speech of President Grant.

Yesterday General Tate, the new Minister from Hayti, was introduced to the President by the Secretary of State, and, upon delivering his credentials, made the remarks of which the following is a translation:-Mr. President: I have the honor to hand to your Excellency the letter which accredits me to you as Minister Plenipotentiary and Envoy Extraordinary of the Government of Hayti. The great triumphs of humanity which have been achieved of late years in this hemisphere, and which are mainly due to the laborious and untiring efforts of American philanthropy, the intelligence and indomitable energy with which your illustrious predecessor, Abraham Lincoln, and the present administration have consecrated them in the statutes of this great people of the United States, and its policy, reader it henceforth more obligatory upon the republic of Hayti than upon the other nations of the world, and particularly gratifying, to be represented near the Government at Washington. The exalted philanthropy and the readiness to make amends to a race formerly oppressed in this country—those noble princi-ples which have led your administration, Mr, President, to select a man of that race to represent the great and powerful republic of the United States in the republic of Hayti, have awakened in the hearts of all Haytiens, who eagerly desire the advancement and elevation of their race, a just sentiment of admiration and President Salnave, as Chief Magistrate, chosen by the nation, has instructed me to bear witness to your Excellency how highly he appreciates this token of esteem and consideration shown to our race. He extertains, in consequence, the bighest hopes for the extension of the relations and the mutual good feeling and sympathy which must henceforth exist between the two countries. For my own part, Mr. President I congratulate myself, and feel proud that Providence has caused the choice of President Salnave to fall upon me to be the interpreter of the feelings which I so carnestly share towards the people of the United States in general, and your admin-istration in particular. You may rest assured, Mr. President, that my efforts in the position which I have the honor to fill near your Gov-ernment will always tend to strengthen and con-solidate the harmony which alreads of harmony solidate the harmony which already so happily exists between the Government of the United States and that of Hayti.

The President replied as follows:—
General:—If any proof was wanting of the unfounded character of the prejudice which until recently pervaded at least parts of this country against the race from which you are sprung, it might be found in the high tone and polished style of the remarks which you have just uttered. That, however, like all similar prejudices-no matter how deeply implantedmust sooner or later yield to the force of truth. The threes by which the new birth here was accomplished were, indeed, agonizing, and their effects even now are scarcely over. Provident statesmen, however, have neglected no fit opportunity for sanctioning and securing by law those privileges for your kinsmen which have been the inevitable and natural resutt of our great convulsion. Among them is their right to employment abroad as well as at home in the public service-a right which, as you say, has been acknowledged by the appointment of one of the formerly proscribed race to represent the United States in Hayti. I congratulate myself for this occasion to render homage to the change in public sentiment adverted to by receiving you as I cordially do, as the first Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary from that republic.

PLAYING POLICY.

The Extent and Manner of Policy Playing-Great Frands on the Government. From the New York Tribune of Nov. 22. Of all the curses with which this city abounds there is none more baneful in its influence on the poorer classes than policy-playing, which is carried on with more or less success in over 600 different places in this city. The patrons of the game are to be found lounging around the lowest gin-shops, loaf-ing about the docks, lottering in alleys, in fact, in any place where there is crime and misery you will see a number of habitual players, any one of whom would deny himself food to indulge in the pleasures of hope of making a "hit" in Pokomoke or Delaware. The business is conducted in such a clandes-tine manner that the public would have known but little of its many ramifications had it not been for Supervisor Dutcher's zealous efforts to secure the full revenues which the laws demand. Hereto-fore the lottery managers have paid the five per cent. on their alleged profits, instead of their sales, but an astute revenue detective who, by the direc-tion of Supervisor Dutcher, has been engaged "playing policy" on a large scale and at various shops, discovered that the profits were hundreds of thousands instead of a few thousand dollars per month. The selling of lottery tickets is the lightest eart of the business, and yields but little profit to part of the business, and yields but little profit to the managers. The principal lottery firms in the city are C. H. Murray & Co., and the drawings of city are C. H. Murray & Co., and the drawings of their various lotteries are thus announced every day in several of our contemporaries. The drawings take place at St. Louis, Covington, or some Southern city, every morning and noon, and the figures are telegraphed in cypher to the companies in this city. The policy dealer, like a British convict, is known only by his number. He has no responsibility, and takes no risk. He says to his patrons, "You pays your money, you takes your choice." His dingy shop, almost always located in the slums of the city, is so screened and shaded that you can hardly see the chalk-marks on the blackboard, announcing the lucky numbers. There is no furniture to be seen, not oven a desk or There is no furniture to be seen, not even a desk or pen or ink. A small show-window, lined with faded cotton velvet, contains a handful of bogus coins and one or two worthless mining bonds. At an early hour in the morning the poor deluded victims, old and young, of both sexes, may be seen sneaking into the shops with their "gigs," "saddles." or "horses" all made out, having interpreted their dream of the night before by the aid of the "Wheel of Fortune" or the "Player's Guide." In many instances their first visit is to the "Three Golden Balls," when they pawn a shawl, callco dress, or a faded bed quilt for a "starter." Too often it is a dishonest servant with a "starter." Too often it is a dishonest servant with a silver spoon, a sheet, or some article of wearing apparel, which has been stolen from their masters, and which is rarely, if ever, redeemed. Chioc, who enters with her pail and scrubbing brush, has got a day's work at house cleaning, but having dreamed the night before of seeing a horse killed on Sixth avenue, near Fourteenth street, plays a "gig" which is three numbers, 4, 6, 14. Chloe plays ten cents in each lottery, and will enjoy the pleasures of hope till noon. Uncle Job plays 4, 11, 44, and declares if they come from the wheel he will whitewash no more. The bloated "buffer" from the low groggery on the corner has just been liberated from cell 71, and he plays that number to come out or the first plays that number to come out first or last. The young novice, who does not entirely understand the combinations, plays some number to come out anywhere, but gets but a small premium in the event of the number turning up. In fact, all players take a chance on any remarkable event or dream. The deeler is furnished with fact, all players take a chance on any remarkable event or dream. The dealer is furnished with a blank sheet, bearing the name of the firm that backs event or dream. The dealer is furnished with a blank sheet, bearing the name of the firm that backs him. On this he enters all the sales, and must close the list in time to reach headquarters at 12 o'clock M. Then his accounts are balanced, and the "hits" are paid immediately. The dealer receives 12½ per cent. on the sales, and is allowed 5 per cent. for rent and incidental expenses. The lottery firm keep 2 ledger, in which the dealer is entered by his number, and every day his account is entered and settled. Sometimes a dealer is suspected of doing more or less business on his own account, at which time he will only enter a half or two-tnirds of his sales. If he is suspected, the firm, who have received the drawings before it is time to close the books, will send one of their runners to the shop who will play a combination of lucky numbers that will be sure to break him. The scene at the policy-shop when the drawings come in is quite exciting. The place is generally thronged with a nervous and anxious crowd of wretches, who press around the blackboard, awaiting the appearance of the drawings. The "hits" are few and far between, and the blasphemy and maledictions to be heard from the disappointed players are frightful. They curse their luck, and madly rush into the nearest groggery, where they assuage their disappointment in "benzine" whisky. Few of them have any idea of the odds against their making a "hit," but when it is known that out of 80 or more numbers that are placed in the wheel there are but 13 drawn, and that the three numbers of a "gig" must be among the 13, the reader can readily understand what chances the known that out of 80 or more numbers that are placed in the wheel there are but 13 drawn, and that the three numbers of a "gig" must be among the 13, the reader can readily understand what chances the poor player has of getting any of his money back. There is something about policy-playing more seducing than fighting the "figer." Many a poor man or woman will waste half of their yearly carnings, and confess that it is so much thrown away. As an instance of the heave odds against the player, a young man over ten years ago saw three fire-engines going to a large fire, the bells having rang a general alarm. The companies were 8, 29, and 38. He and a friend made a purse of one dollar and played the numbers in a "gig." To their surprise the numbers were drawn that afternoon, and they received $50. The parties have never played since that time; but one of them has the habit of looking at the drawings every day while reading the morning papers, and he says that he has never seen the same "gig" but once during the entire time. On Saturday last $ and 29 were out in the Kentucky lottery at noon, and in the same lottery $ and 38 were drawn in the afternoon. As usual, there was only one number needed to complete the "gig."

As usual, there was only one number needed to com-As usual, there was only one number needed to complete the "gig."

The developments made by the investigation of the Internal Revenue officers show that the lottery managers have been swindling the Government to an enormous amount, and that out of the 600 policy managers have been switted in the Government to an enormous amount, and that out of the 600 policy dealers in this city but tweive had paid the $100 license required by act of Congress. As fast as the dealers are brought up, they say that they would willingly pay the license, but that they are unable to get a manager's bond, which is also required. The managers say that they will not sign the bond, for the reason that they have no security against the dealers negotiating with other firms. The examination of Murray & Co.'s books show that their sales during the months of August and September were $375,000, while they paid tax on only $18,000. The firm of Murray & Co. includes, it is said, Mr. Benjamin Wood and Marcus Cicero Stanley. In many places on the ledger appears the following endorsement on the accounts of the dealers who are designated by numbers:—"Settled, B. B." Supervisor Dutcher is determined that every policy dealer in the city shall pay the $100 license, and shall have a bond signed by the firm that he deals with. By this means the Government will derive a revenue of over $500,000 a year from this source.

$500,000 a year from this source. DARING ESCAPE.

Pistols Presented at an Official's Head-His Charge Rescued by Roughs—The Prisoner and His Friends Captured.

Some days ago a notorious thief of the Fourth ward, named Andrew Coakley, was sentenced at the Court of Special Sessions to Blackwell's Island Penitentiary for six months. Coakley has many sympathetic friends, among whom are Jim Gibbons and "Scotch Level," of the Fourth ward, whose characters will bear no closer scrutiny than his own.

Yesterday Coakley was taken from the Tombs to the foot of West Fifty-eighth street by an officer, and put on board the Charity Hospital boat, for the purpose of being transported across the river to the apartments awalting him. Just as the boat had left the pier a party of roughs in another boat, headed by Gibbons and "Scotch Level," rowed alongwide, diew cocked revelvers, and demanded the prisoner. The keeper, in danger of his life, surrendered Coakley, and the vagabonds, after landing, hurried away in a horse and wagon provided for the purpose. The circumstances of the rescue were promptly communicated to the Central Police Office and sent out on a general alarm. This occurred about 12 o'clock—half an hour after the rescue. A few hours after Captain Allaire, of the Fourth precinct, and his officers, who were on the alert, arrested Coakley and his deliverers, Scotch Level and Gibbons, in Elizabeth street, and locked them up. It is said that others besides the two named above assisted in the attack upon the boat's named above assisted in the attack upon the boat's crew. It is said that Levi received a builet through the hand, fired by one of the crew of the hospital boat.—N. Y. Herald, Nov. 22.

A HORRIBLE AFFAIR.

Enoch Arden with a Variation—A.Woman's Second Husband Stabs her Child and Attempts

From the Sacramento (Cal.) Union, Nov. 13. A shocking affair occurred on L street, between Twentieth and Twenty-first streets, last evening.

Twentieth and Twenty-first streets, last evening. Some three or four years since a man named Mitchell, a shoemaker, residing in this city, had a falling out with his wife, which resulted in their separation, Mrs. Mitchell going to Austin, Nevada.

While there she made the acquaintance of a man named B. J. Johnston, and, having received information leading her to believe that Mitchell was dead, she married him. After several months had passed, however, she found that her former husband was not dead. The parties meeting, she concluded to not dead. The parties meeting, she concluded to leave Johnston, and carrying out her intention, came to this city with Mitchell.

About three months ago her second husband came to Sacramento and made such threats and acted in such a manner that she had him arrested, fearing that her life was not safe. After being released from custody, Johnston returned to Austin.

On Thursday last he came back to the city, and last evening about 6 o'clock called at Mitchell's residence on L street, near Twenty-first, where he met his wife, and, after a slight conversation with her, begged that she would let him see his child (a daughbegged that she would let him see his child (a daughter about six months old, which was born shortly after her mother came back from Austin), saying that he intended to leave for Scotland to-day, and would like to look upon the babe before his departure. Mrs. Mitchell brought him the child, which he received and held a moment, and then suddenly drawing a small bowie knife, inflicted a terrible cut on its abdomen, made a lunge at Mitchell, which the latter parried, and fied. The child died a short time afterwards in its mother's arms. afterwards in its mother's arms.

People in the vicinity raised the shout of "Murder!" and the perpetrator of the deed was quickly pursued by three citizens, who followed him up one street and down another six or seven blocks, at the top of their speed, and finally caught him in E. Gruhler's yard, Sixteenth and L streets, where he was engaged in conversation with another man who happened to be there, apparently innocent of any crime. Upon finding himself discovered, however, he said, "Well, you've got me, boys; you can do what you want to with me."

About this time it was discovered that he had stabbed himself twice in the neighborhood of the

About this time it was discovered that he had stabbed himself twice in the neighborhood of the heart. He also informed his captors that he had taken a large dose of muriatic acid (probably having intended to take prussic acid), and would be dead before they could get him to the station-house. They, nevertheless, after awhile, started for that place with him, when they met Chief Martz and Deputy-Constable Faylor, who had been notified, and, together with other officers, had just started out to hunt for Johnston.

The latter was conveyed to Dr. Simmons office, where his wounds were examined, and found to consist of two cuts, one about three inches deep.

consist of two cuts, one about three inches deep, slanting downward, and the other less than an inch in depth. He also complained of a burning sensation in the throat and stomach. After his wounds had been dressed he was taken to the County Hospital to await the result of his injuries, which are not necessarily fatal, an officer having been detailed to watch him meanwhile.

While being conveyed to the physician's office Johnston gave Chief Martz the following document, which shows his feelings and intentions prior to the

"SACRAMENTO, Nov. 12 .- I take my child with me in order that shame and disgrace may not fall on her. She, Sarah Johnston, now Sarah Mitchell, ran away with my child. I married her in Austin, Nevada State, and she took everything from me and left me in debt. Please bury my child with me. They were all Mormons. So good-by to my friends, and Sed bless them. and God bless them. B. G. JOHNSTON.
